F. MILITARY EDUCATION IN CIVILIAN SCHOOLS

1. Source believed that compulsory military training existed in all civilian schools of college level. He could not elaborate.

2. He did not know the required number of hours of military training. He seriously doubted that summer training was conducted.

3. He believed that compulsory military training was required in all secondary schools. He had no other details.

4. The DOSAAF organizations were directly responsible for military training in secondary schools. Source heard that a military instructor (voyenruk) was on duty in each school to conduct training.

5. In source's opinion, commissions were given only to medical students. All other students had to attend various military schools to receive commissions.

6. He did not know the manner in which DOSAAF conducted training or any of the particulars of the training.
